Catholic Schools are vitally important educational institutions, however, in recent years many Catholic High Schools have suffered from enrollment losses due to weakening feeder school networks and strengthening competition from well-funded public and magnet schools. Given the reality that much of the cost structure of the schools is fixed, the result has been increased operating costs and pressures to raise tuition, resulting in weaker value propositions.

Learn how enlightened leaders like Frank Miley of Cretin-Derham Hall and Michael Brennan of Holy Family Catholic High School are responding to these challenges by capitalizing on cutting edge demographic and benchmarking analysis to exploit new enrollment opportunities and replan their finances to increase perceived value.

Join Dr. Harry Bloom of Measuring Success, Frank Miley, and Michael Brennan as they explore the need for change and how to implement it. Use this session to consider an organizational game plan to boost your school's success!
